SATURDAY TO MONDAY

By A. M. DAVIES OGDEN

Copyright, 1905, by A. M. Davies Ogdan

Pretty little Mrs. Ferris looked up from the yellow paper she held to stare at her husband in a dismay that was almost tragic.

"Whatever in the world am I to do?" she demanded. "You know when Marion landed on Thursday I wrote her that she simply must come to us for Sunday, and now here's a telegram from Harris Rogers saying that he will be out tonight too. Luckily they have not selected the same train. But what am I to do with them?"

Her husband, glancing abstractedly over his paper, wrinkled his brow. "Well, what of it?" he asked. "Did not you want some man for Marion?"

"Of course," impatiently. "I did ask Dick Percival, but he couldn't come. However, Harry Rogers is here, so I knew I could depend on him. He admires Marion tremendously. But Harris! Don't you realize that it is hardly six months since his engagement to Marion was broken off? It was just after that she went abroad."

Mr. Ferris whistled. "Oh, the deuce!" he ejaculated. "So it is I forgot." "Isn't it awful?" gasped his wife. "Of course I've always told Harris that all he ever had to do was just to telegraph that he was coming, but then I never could have imagined anything so terrible as this. And I don't know why the engagement was broken, and I don't care. I'm fond of them both. But how ever can I explain his coming to Marion? She'll always believe that I did it on purpose," despairingly. "She'll never forgive me."

Mr. Ferris, duly impressed by the gravity of the crisis, laid down his paper.

"I will tell you what we must do then," he began slowly. "We shall have to devote ourselves so thoroughly to this that they never will be left alone together for a moment. I will have Marion on my mind tonight, and you take Harris. Then tomorrow we can switch off so that it won't seem so apparent. That ought to work pretty well," he declared, brightening up. "And after all it's only for two evenings and a day."

Mrs. Ferris, resigning herself to the inevitable, essayed a smile. "Well," she said satirically, "it's the best we can do. We'll try."

Dinner, however, was not a success. Despite the best efforts of host and hostess conversation languished and constraint was in the air. With the peculiar fatality that so often attends made to order talk the subjects touched upon were usually the most inopportune that could have been mentioned, ranging from unhappy marriage to divorce and from an excuse for incontinence to a reason for death.

"While in the language of the never speak of the rope," says a proverb. But somehow the rope always will obtrude itself. By the time the four had returned to the drawing room Mrs. Ferris was in a state of nervous tension almost beyond endurance.

A quiet game of bridge somewhat restored her equanimity. Conversation over the card table was necessarily limited. And so the evening passed.

"But I could see that poor Marion was bored to death," admitted Mrs. Ferris to her husband when at last the guests were safely ensconced in their own rooms. "She hates cards. And as for me, I never knew whether I was playing spades or without. But what else was there to do? She was dreadfully upset when I told her Harris was coming. She flushed all up, though she tried to murmur something about please not minding. It seems she hasn't seen him since the day of their quarrel. So of course it was awkward for her. What shall we do all tomorrow?" distractedly. "And if it rains?"

But it did not rain. The sun, climbing gayly over the tree tops, brought with him a perfect day of blue and gold. The morning was safely got through with at church, and after a leisurely stroll home it was time for luncheon. The Robinsons from across the river and one from the other dropped in for the midday meal. Harris Rogers, inson greeted Miss Trevor with unconcealed joy.

"I didn't know that you were in this country?" he exclaimed. The girl laughed. "I am going home tomorrow," she explained, "but Mrs. Ferris wouldn't hear of my leaving without giving her a day first. And so here I am."

"And so the gods are kind," supplemented young Robinson. "I say, don't you want to come out on the river with me? It would be heavenly and cool. Do come," he urged. "Now?" asked the girl doubtfully. She glanced about the table. Lunch was nearly over, and the men had begun to puff comfortably at their pipes and cigarettes. Harris Rogers, an eager light in his brown eyes, was leaning forward talking earnestly to Muriel Heath, who smilingly and daintily in the freshest of muslin regarded him with an amused smile. Miss Trevor's mouth tightened. Then she turned to Robinson. "Come along," she said quickly. "I'd love to."

ted into the garden after her husband. Their Sundays were very precious to them.

It was late when they re-entered the house. Mrs. Ferris, her hands all grubby despite the gardening gloves she essayed to wear and which usually reposed on the nearest wash, fled upstairs to make a hasty toilet. On passing she cast a glance about the girls' room. Empty! Downstairs the front door slammed. Then again it opened and shut. Mrs. Ferris, feeling very guilty, scrambled wildly into her frock. How fearful to leave those two alone! Had Marion not been off rowing with young Robinson they would all have gone for a drive together and there would have been no such contretemps. But now, absorbed in her garden, she had quite forgotten her responsibilities as hostess.

Still a little breathless from her haste, she flew down the stairs. Then, arrested by the sound of voices in the drawing room, Mrs. Ferris stopped suddenly.

They were talking, actually talking. In there. She paused involuntarily. "And this is positively the very first chance I've had to speak a word to Dick Percival, a color, unmistakably belonging to Harris."

"Last night playing cards and church this morning. And then to sneak off this afternoon with that Robinson girl."

"Well, you seemed perfectly content with Muriel Heath," came a spirited response. "I don't care anything about Harry Robinson," rather vaguely.

"And I'm sure that I don't care anything about Muriel Heath," was the retort. "She was only saying what a bully girl you were and how much she admired you. I could hardly disagree with her" in an aggrieved tone.

"Come, now, Marion," the voice changed abruptly—"haven't we been foolish long enough?"

"Well," said the girl reluctantly. Mrs. Ferris, uttering a little gasp, caught at the drawing room curtains. There, his arm about the girl's waist, her eyes looking happily up into his, stood Harris and Marion, the two that Mrs. Ferris and Bob had worked so faithfully to keep apart. At sight of her both started and flushed guiltily.

But Mrs. Ferris, a sudden sparkle of comprehension dawning in her great gray eyes, stopped forward. "Marion!" she demanded. "Marion, did you know—did you guess—that Harris?"

The girl, over whose face the rosy waves of color were flooding, tried to steady her traitorous lips. "Well, I—I didn't know whether he would come or not," she confessed. "but—but I wrote that I would be here."

A Very Sick Boy.
 Mark Twain on his last visit to his birthplace—Hannibal, Mo.—told to the school children a true story about a schoolboy.

"This boy," he said, "awoke one morning very ill. His groans alarmed the household. The doctor was sent for and came posthaste. The doctor was sent for the sickroom, 'what is the trouble?'"

"A pain in my side," said the boy. "Yes, sir." "Is the right hand stiff?" "A little." "How about the right foot?" "That's stiff too."

"The doctor winked at the boy's mother. 'Well,' he said, 'you're pretty sick, but you'll be able to go to school on Monday. Let me see, today is Saturday and—'"

"Is today Saturday?" said the boy in a vexed tone. "I thought it was Friday."

"Half an hour later the boy declared himself healed and got up. Then they packed him off to school, for it was Friday after all."—Philadelphia Record.

The Ghost Qui.
 With the aid of the two candles which I lighted I discovered the grate in the wall near the head of the bed, and on examining it closely I perceived that there was a fire in it. The grate would have held quite a double handful of coal if carefully put on; the fire, which seemed to be flickering so feebly, had yet had the energy to draw all the warmth of the chamber up the chimney, and I stood shivering in the temperature of a subterranean dungeon. The place instantly gave evidence of being haunted, and the testimony of my nerves on this point was corroborated by the spectral play of the firelight on the ceiling when I blew out my candles.

In the middle of the night I woke to the sense of something creeping with a rustling noise over the floor. I rejected the hypothesis of my bed curtain falling into place, though I remembered putting it back that I might have light to read myself drowsy; I knew at once that it was a ghost walking the night there, and walking hard. Suddenly it ceased, and I knew why. It had been frozen out.—W. D. Howells in Harper's Magazine.

Excessive Water Drinking.
 Dr. K. Beerwald of Berlin is opposed to the free drinking of water so often advised. He says: Excessive water drinking not only produces temporary disturbances, it also creates direct organic disorders. The heart and kidneys are particularly affected by the excess, and in these cases the vascular system is overcharged and the heart and kidneys overworked. Proof of such a condition is frequently seen in cases of slight injury. A man who suffers frequently from thirst bleeds easily, and we may well consider that excessive thirst is a sign that the amount of fluid in the body is not kept within bounds and that this condition must be remedied by opposing the feeling of thirst.

Hints About Screws.

Where screws are driven into soft wood and subjected to considerable strain they are very likely to work loose, and it is often difficult to make them hold. In such cases the use of glue is probable. Make the glue thick. Immerse a stick about half the size of the screw and put it into the hole. Then put in the screw and drive it home as quickly as possible. When there is an article of furniture to be hastily repaired and no glue is at hand, bore a hole, insert the stick, fill the rest of the cavity with pulverized rosin, then heat the screw sufficiently to melt the rosin as it is driven in. Where screws are driven into wood for temporary purposes they can be more easily removed by dipping them in oil before inserting. When buying screws, notice that the heads are small and well cut, that there are no flaws in the body or thread part and that they have blunt points. A screw of good make will drive as easily into oak as others into pine and will endure having twice the force brought against it.

Pushing the Old Folks Aside.

When the babies are cross and a man would like a quiet retreat there is none for him. But in a few years, when the children are grown and he is in the way, the daughters and mother put their heads together and originate a den. There is no den for the mother because she gracefully eliminates herself by sitting in the kitchen or running over to a neighbor's. It is her natural disposition to hide in a corner or remove herself entirely, and it is not the natural disposition of the father, hence the den. It has a couch and some pipes and tobacco and the books which the neighbors haven't got around to borrowing as yet, though if father begins a story today the book will be found to be loaned out when he wants to finish it tomorrow. The den is a fashionable way of pushing the old man out. If there is one in your house, Mr. Man, don't be deceived.—Atchison Globe.

A Two Edged Cure.

A story is told of the wonderful cure from deafness of a patient who was recommended to hear a Wagner opera and to sit near the orchestra by the trombones. The physician accompanied his patient and sat beside him. Suddenly, while the crash of the instruments was at its loudest, the deaf man found he could hear. "Doctor," he almost shrieked, "I can hear!" The doctor gave no sign that he noticed the remark. "I tell you, doctor," repeated the patient in ecstasy, "you have saved me! I have recovered my hearing." Still the physician was silent. He had become deaf himself.—Harper's Weekly.

Two Repulsive Pictures.

In the atelier of Adolph William Bouguereau, the great French painter, there hung two terrible pictures. One represented a man dying in the desert, with the frightful form of the angel of death descending upon him. The other depicted Dante and Virgil in hell watching one victim and gnawing at the throat of another. The two pictures failed because of their horror. "If I had stuck to such subjects as those," the artist used to say, "I should have starved long ago." He found a market for the beautiful.

Painful.

"What does Bifkins remind you of?" "I hate to tell." "Because it's a reflection on Bifkins?" "No, on me." "I don't understand." "Well, I'll explain. Every time I see Bifkins he reminds me of a little bill I've owed him for over a year."—London Tit-Bits.

Solitude and the Crowd.

It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude to live after our own; but the great man is he who in the midst of the crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

BAD STOMACH MAKES BAD BLOOD.

You can't make sweet butter in a foul corn. Every farmer's wife knows this. Your stomach, churns and digests the food you eat, and if foul, torpid or out of order, your whole system suffers from bad poisoning. You will have foul breath, coated tongue, bad taste, poor appetite and a whole train of disagreeable symptoms. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which is not a beverage composed of whiskey or alcohol, being entirely free from intoxicants, is a great regulator and invigorator of the stomach, liver and bowels.

"About a year ago I was ill with blood poisoning," writes Mrs. Evelyn Lewis, of 80 Walter Street, Buffalo, N. Y. "I had what seemed to be a small sore on my lip. It became very angry in appearance and began to spread until it nearly covered my face. I was a frightful sight and could not go out. The house because of my appearance. I used a blood medicine which did not give me any relief. Then I began to take your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I was greatly benefited with the first bottle and after taking the second bottle was completely cured. The eruptions eruption disappeared and my blood was cleansed. My complexion is clear and fresh and I have felt better this year than I did for some time before. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is certainly a most remarkable medicine."

"Don't accept a substitute for a medicine which performs such cures and which has a uniformly successful record of nearly forty years to its credit. It's an insult to your intelligence for a dealer to try by over-persuasion to palm off upon you in its stead some inferior article with no record to back it up. You know what you want; it is his business to meet that want."

Thoughts at Random.

The securing of the right of way to McNear's by the electric railway company shows that they mean business. It is furthermore a fact that the Key Route ferry people are having new steamers built at Dickie's, which seems to back up the report that they have disposed of the boats now in use. Without a doubt all the country about San Francisco will undergo marvelous changes and development within the next few years. The development of Southern California has about reached its zenith, and that the Southern part of the state should have been built up and become famous first was really a case of getting the cart before the horse. Southern California's growth is soon to be overshadowed by the greater growth of San Francisco's suburbs.

This is undoubtedly a rushing age with a craving for excitement. This characteristic is not confined to any strata of society, nor does old age preclude it. The American of today is not satisfied with a passive life. His business and his pleasure are made up of excitement and a series of thrills. This is particularly true of those who dwell in our cities. There is still some quiet and repose in the rural districts, but that, too, is fast waning. The craving for excitement is illustrated by the attendance at the races and at the football game last week, when thousands of people rushed and crowded the race-track at Oakland and the bleachers at Stanford.

Oh! where, oh! where
Is the U. C. Farm?
Oh! where, oh! where will it be?
With its cabbages great,
And strawberries late;
Oh! where, oh! where will it be?

Oh! where, oh! where
Is the U. C. Farm?
Oh! where, oh! where will it be?
With its cobless corn,
And profs forlorn;
Oh! where, oh! where will it be?

Oh! where, oh! where
Is the U. C. Farm?
Oh! what, oh! what has been done?
With transplantation
And no explanation
It may go to Washington.

Oh! where, oh! where is the Farmer arch?
Oh! where, oh! where can he be?
Again he's gone East
To hobnob and feast;
Wheeler's in Washington.

It is a noteworthy fact that three women are on the Carnegie hero list and have been awarded for their bravery. In none of the cases were they prompted by maternal love, which ordinarily is supposed to be the only spur that will prompt a woman to acts of heroism. The Carnegie heroines were prompted by humanitarian impulse alone.

If you claim to be in society,
And up-to-date, you know,
Just order billy owl on toast,
For that is all the go.
It is said, in fact, by some old sage,
That once in the ancient past,
Man then mistook
An owl that was cooked,
For quail, which he ate up fast.
Oh! then there were wise looks and winks,
And all the owls did hoot,
And ever after there was cause for laughter,
When the night birds went on a toot.

Manufacturers Oppose the Rate Bill

The newspapers of Pittsburg, Pa., see in the proposition to give the Interstate Commerce Commission the authority to make railroad rates, such rates to go into effect pending an appeal, many disadvantages to manufacturing interests. The Pittsburg "Times" editorially points out the situation to its readers:
"To compete with foreign markets the products of Pittsburg must be sold cheaper in foreign countries than in this country, but the labor employed in the manufacture of articles for export is paid exactly the same wages as if the goods were for domestic consumption. Therefore somebody must absorb the loss, and the manufacturers themselves are dividing that loss with the railroad companies."

"Another phase of the problem is that if the railroad revenues are reduced, one of the first things the railroads will do is to curtail their expenses for material, and Pittsburg has and is furnishing a very large majority of the railway supplies consumed in this country. So that an event of this kind might be a blow to Pittsburg manufacturing interests, even if her own rates were not interfered with."

"The Press is not prepared to say that conditions do not require some additional legislation, but it is not prepared to advocate a rate bill that will interfere with Pittsburg's progress and prosperity. If the rate bill will be a good thing for Pittsburg, let us advocate it night and day all the time, but if it will not be and if we are now in a position to market our products at the consuming points in competition with other cities and other manufacturing communities, and are enjoying rates that might be termed favorable, should we place ourselves in a position where our rate schedules would be made by men who have no interest whatever in our manufacturing industries and general prosperity? We must protect ourselves. If we gain by such legislation, we should have it. If we are to be injured, we should fight it."

Every Two Minutes

Physicians tell us that all the blood in a healthy human body passes through the heart once in every two minutes. If this action becomes irregular the whole body suffers. Poor health follows poor blood; Scott's Emulsion makes the blood pure. One reason why is such a great aid is because it passes so quickly into the blood. It is partly digested before it enters the stomach; a double advantage in this. Less work for the stomach; quicker and more direct benefits. To get the greatest amount of good with the least possible effort is the desire of everyone in poor health. Scott's Emulsion does just that. A change for the better takes place even before you expect it.

We will send you a sample free. Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

BLOOD POISONING CAUSED HER DEATH

Mrs. Andreux Cuts Herself With Rusty Scissors and Passes Away After Six Weeks Suffering

Mrs. Andreux, a well-known resident of this place, died on Wednesday as a result of blood poisoning. About six weeks ago she cut her finger with a rusty pair of scissors, while ripping a pair of pants. The wound became infected and Mrs. Andreux called in a doctor. Her condition finally became alarming and her finger was amputated, but this did not stay the progress of the poison, which had gotten into her whole system. She suffered intensely and finally succumbed.

Her daughter, who was in constant attendance of the mother and dressed the wound daily, in some manner contracted the poison by letting a scratched portion of her arm come in contact with the infected finger. She is now in a very precarious condition herself and grave fears have been entertained for her recovery.

Mrs. Andreux, the deceased, was the mother of a large family. Mrs. Charles McDavitt is one of her daughters.

Shower Party for Bride-Elect

The linen shower party given at the Knight home east of town for Miss Celeste Granice on Tuesday afternoon was a delightful affair. Mrs. Knight and Miss Bessie Knight received their guests from three to five o'clock. Fortune telling was the feature of the afternoon. The house was prettily decorated in autumn leaves and foliage, and the young girls and matrons, attractively gowned, made the scene of the afternoon's gathering a very attractive one. The bride-elect was bountifully showered with many appropriate gifts, the handiwork of those friends who had been bidden to the gathering. She responded in verse, acknowledging the compliment paid her, while the guests were being served dainty refreshments.

Those present were: Mesdames H. Bates, R. Murphy, H. Gottenberg, Hotz, McMullin, Keogh, Knight, Allen; Misses Lowell, Fraser, Richert, Knight, Pemberton, Granice, Stofen and Bethune.

Miner, assisted by Miss Pearl Allen, fish pond.

OLD MISSION MAY BECOME MUSEUM.

Native Sons Efforts to Improve Landmark is Attended With Success.

The old Mission San Francisco Solano is being repaired and the much-needed work being done has come about through the efforts of the Native Sons, who have subscribed liberally to a fund for that purpose.

Sonoma owes it to William Randolph Hearst, also a Native Son and a member of Sea Point Parlor of Marin county, that the Mission was purchased for $5,000, and thus saved from the ravages of commercialism, and given to the State to cherish as a sacred relic of the pioneer days.

When the old church is properly repaired and put in shape there is some talk of turning it into a museum, where relics of the early days may be kept and preserved.

A. W. FOSTER MAY BUY MORE RANCHES

Has the Poppe, Spaulding and Keiser Ranches Near Embarcadero In View

A. W. Foster, president of the California Northwestern Railway Company, who last year purchased from the Fair heirs the ten-thousand acre farm, formerly known as the Behler ranch, has lately been looking over the Poppe, Keiser and Spaulding farms, which adjoin his present holdings on the east.

Of these places the Polpula Rancho, owned by Mrs. J. A. Poppe of this place, is noted for its hot water springs. Although these springs are undeveloped the flow is simply immense. The temperature of the water is also remarkable, exceeding 115 degrees Fahrenheit. Mr. Foster has been very reticent in regard to the purchase of this and the Keiser and Spaulding places, but it is surmised that he has in view the building of one of the most attractive and accessible hot mineral springs resorts north of San Francisco.

Will Have Larger Fire Company

It was recently decided at a meeting of the Sonoma Volunteer Firemen to increase the membership from forty to sixty. This will give the town more protection in case of fire, although the department as it is, has always been very effective in past instances.

AN EPISODE OF THE LATE WAR

(Original.)
My passport described me as being six feet high, light hair and blue eyes. I obtained it for the purpose of visiting the Japanese army in Manchuria just before the battle of Mukden. I was received by a member of the staff, who examined the passport, comparing me with it very carefully. Notwithstanding that the Japanese are a secretive people, I noticed that the officer had something on his mind, and that something pertained to me. However, when he had done with the passport he handed it back to me, apparently satisfied, and asked me what he could do for me. I replied that I had come all the way from America to see some of the war from the Japanese side. He promised to report my arrival to Marshal Oyama. He did so, and when he returned bore an invitation from the marshal for me to ride with him on a tour of the outposts.

During the ride I was under the special care of the man who had received me, Major Seshimo, who pointed out the different objects of interest. I was introduced to the marshal, who expressed himself sensible of the sympathy the Japanese cause had received in America. When we returned to headquarters I was about to take my leave when Major Seshimo told me that a tent had been provided for me with the staff. I much preferred to remain independent and declined, but the major informed me that a refusal of an honor that was intended for me as an American and not as an individual would be displeasing to the marshal, and I at once accepted the hospitality.

The next morning Major Seshimo asked me to come to his tent for a smoke, and while I was there a Russian prisoner was brought up. The major asked me if I spoke any Russian, and I replied that I did not. He then began to question the man himself in that language and seemed to get on fairly well. I listened to what I did not understand. Suddenly the major turned to me and asked:

"What do you think of that?"

"You forget, major, that I do not speak Russian," I replied.

"Trace," he said, "I forgot."

Somewhere I got the idea that he was trying to betray me into admitting a knowledge of the Russian language. The next morning I told Major Seshimo that I had seen all I desired to see of an army at the front and was about to take my leave, thanking him for his hospitality. He said that I must by all means wait over another day—that a party among whom were several ladies were expected to visit headquarters and the marshal wished me to meet them. Since he would take no refusal I consented.

The party were English with the exception of one very pretty woman, a Bulgarian. We all dined with the marshal, the Bulgarian lady being assigned to me as a dinner companion. During the meal she whispered to me: "I know who you are. You are thus far safe. When you leave take with you the paper I have slipped into your pocket. It contains information for which I am to receive a hundred thousand rubles. I will give you two-thirds of it. If I get away I will meet you at Vladivostok. But I am suspected and have little hope. If I am lost all will belong to you."

What could I do? Betray a woman to death who had placed her life in my hands? I sat, cold chills alternating with fever till the dinner had ended.

The next day the party were taken about to see what was interesting to them, and I saw clearly that I was expected to accompany them. I did so, but before leaving destroyed the paper the woman had slipped into my pocket. She did not attempt to communicate with me during the ride except as any one else would do so. When we returned to headquarters I noticed that something had happened during our absence. By the interest which seemed to attach to me I could not but suspect that this something pertained to me. A certain constancy that I had noticed in every one I met seemed to have disappeared. Indeed, all seemed desirous to atone for something. I announced my intention to leave during the day, but all joined in a sincere request that I would remain for one more dinner. I consented, and we made a gay party that night at table.

I was placed beside the Bulgarian woman again and dreaded a repetition of the events of the previous night. While the dinner was in progress the marshal addressed me:

"What did you do with the information for General Kuropatkin?"

I looked at the woman who had given it to me, then at the marshal. My heart was beating the long roll.

"Burned it," I replied.

"Wisely done. I owe you an explanation and an apology. The day of your arrival among us we got wind of a Russian spy answering your description. We did not like to offend an innocent person, especially an American, so we have kept you under surveillance. You must not blame the lady who slipped the paper in your pocket, for she only did it at my request and to give you an opportunity to prove that you were what you pretended to be. However, we now know that we have been mistaken in you, for today the real spy was captured with incriminating documents on him. He is exactly your height, with your light hair and blue eyes."

The next morning as I left the headquarters I passed the spy going to his execution. I shuddered and hurried on. I had had enough of seeing war at the front.

Constipation

Health is absolutely impossible, if constipation be present. Many serious cases of liver and kidney complaint have sprung from neglected constipation. Such a deplorable condition is unnecessary. There is a cure for it. Herbine will speedily remedy matters. C. A. Lindsay, P. M., Bronson, Fla. writes, Feb. 12, 1892: "Having used Herbine, I find it a fine medicine for constipation. 50c a bottle. Sold by L. S. Simmons."

THE TEXAN RANGERS.

First Fight With Indians, In Which Revolvers Were Used.

John Coffee Hays was reared on a farm in Wilson county, Tenn., being born there in 1817. At the age of eighteen he migrated to Texas, where, during the struggle of that Mexican province for independence, he served with distinction in the military campaign conducted by General Sam Houston, being noted for his bravery and strategy. After the termination of that conflict Hays was placed in command of the small regular force that was shortly afterward organized and became known to fame as the Texan Rangers. Many were the desperate fights in which he was engaged with the fierce Comanches and border Indians, and innumerable were the perils which he encountered. He was the first to supply an armed force with Colt's revolvers for use in battle.

The Indian mode of warfare in those early days was to draw their enemy's fire and then swoop down upon them like a whirlwind, playing their bows and using their long spears with deadly effect. So cautious were they in this respect that they soon distinguished the double barreled gun when it was brought into use and only approached when they were sure that such weapons had been emptied. On the first occasion when Hays and his rangers, armed with the revolvers, met a band on the warpath they allowed their fire to be liberally drawn, and then the Indians charged with exultant cries, but when the revolver was brought into play at close quarters the panic that ensued was absolute and the destruction of the Indians complete. Hays was colonel of the First Texan regiment, the nucleus of which was formed of veteran rangers.

No Poison in Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

From Napier New Zealand. HERALD: Two years ago the Pharmacy Board of New South Wales, Australia, had an analysis made of all the cough medicines that were sold in that market. Out of the entire list they found only one that they declared was entirely free from all poisons. This exception was Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, made by the Chamberlain Medicine Company, Des Moines, Iowa, U. S. A. The absence of all narcotics makes this remedy the safest and best that can be had; and it is with a feeling of security

You want a remedy that will not only give quick relief, but effect a permanent cure.

You want a remedy that will counteract any tendency toward pneumonia: You want a remedy that will relieve the lungs and keep expectoration easy. You want a remedy that is pleasant and safe to take.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy meets all of these requirements and for the speedy and permanent cure of bad colds stands without a peer. For sale by Shoults & Co.

Herb W. Edwards Injured

Herb W. Edwards of Des Moines, Iowa, got a fall on an icy walk last winter, spraining his wrist and bruising his knees. "The next day," he says, "they were so sore and stiff I was afraid I would have to stay in bed, but I rubbed them well with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and after a few applications all soreness had disappeared. I feel that the bottle of Pain Balm saved me several days' time, by say nothing of the suffering." This liniment is for sale by Shoults & Co.
